

CONDITIONING

Conditioning is a measure of how much a function's outputs change when its inputs change. Poorly conditioned functions are highly sensitive to rounding errors that can happen in numerical computing.

ChrisAlbon