

RANDOMIZED SEARCH

A model selection strategy where candidate hyperparameter values are selected randomly from distributions (e.g. normal, uniform). It is more computationally efficient than grid search.

We can specify the number of combinations to test.

ChrisAlbon