

MNAR

MISSING NOT AT RANDOM

A type of missing data where the probability a value is missing is not random and depends on information not captured in the other features. For example, men are less likely to answer a salary question in a survey but we do not capture gender identity in another feature.

Chris Albon