UNDERFLOW

Underflow occurs when a number is so small that it is too small to be represented by the computer. The computer will most often round these values to zero, which can be problematic because zero often behaves differently to small numbers.

Chris Albon